“Silenced No More: Voices of Comfort Women” weaves the unforgettable stories of the suffering voiceless with themes of forgiveness, reconciliation, and unflagging hope, together with the author’s own investigative journey into a tapestry that will open your eyes to one of the largest human rights tragedies in the 20th century: hundreds of thousands of girls and women were trafficked into Imperial Japanese military sex slavery before and during World War II. The grave injustice that was never dealt with at the end of World War II has enabled another cycle of recurrent sex trafficking and prostitution to flourish into a multi-million dollar industry in Japan and the rest of Asia. History infects the present and determines our future. It is this untold history that the author explores. The author, S.J. Friedman, argues that this little known historical atrocity against women must be exposed to encourage a grassroots reconciliation process to begin in Asia – for the healing of both the victims and perpetrators alike, as well as for the nations involved. Closure of the war wounds is urgently needed.
