PEACHES, FROG and the MAN IN THE MOON Norma Slavitt

Imagine getting an invitation to the very first party ever held on the moon. In addition to the surprise and excitement, the invitation is delivered by a zillion fireflies. A trip to the moon would take Peaches and frog on an adventure in space, to a place of beauty and wonder. How were they going to get there? That was their first problem. What would you bring along, and who would you take if you were going to the moon? These were questions that created other problems Peaches had to solve before he could leave. Everyone is invited to come along for the space adventure. A window seat in Peaches' spaceship is reserved for the young reader who will probably never look at the moon in the same light again. Fasten your seatbelts. Get ready for takeoff.
