This is a revision of a book initially titled Shadow on the Tetons; David E. Jackson and the Claiming of the American West and published in 1993. Over the intervening nineteen years new documentation and insights have emerged that significantly expand on Jackson's role as the mountain superintendent who held the Smith, Jackson & Sublette partnership together through trying years when their downstream supplier William H. Ashley proved duplicitous and partner Jedediah Smith failed to contribute to mountain operations. This is a must read for those who wish to know more about the formative years of the Rocky Mountain Fur Trade.
